Rowling has responded to the viral claim that she was "really disappointed" in the Harry Potter film franchise. In a new interview, Rowling responded to the claim, made by author and internet "hactivist" Kathryn MacGregor, that her argument for choosing only one book as part of the series, Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone, was due to her disappointment in the quality of the films. A. Moore told BuzzFeed News that she felt "so many fans were disappointed with the films of the franchise as a whole, and I started to wonder what it would be like to have made a single movie that proved the whole series could have lived without Harry as its focal point.
