I searched lot of on the web for this but I didn't find anything useful which I can understand. A: I think you need to learn Java first for best results. You have the entity that you will map to the database table. You then annotate the class with annotations and the hibernate annotations, like @Id, @Column etc. Then you create a hibernate Mapping file that specifies the database table that the entity will use. You can then create a session that is used to manage the entities you have created. You can then load your entity using session.load(). You can then use the properties of the entity to write database queries. It may be easier just to use JPA for your queries and write a DAO interface that does all the work of mapping from your entity to your database table. 2014-15 Lehigh Mountain Hawks men's basketball team The 2014-15 Lehigh Mountain Hawks men's basketball team represented Lehigh University during the 2014-15 NCAA Division I men's basketball season.
